PART I: INTRODUCTION

This Electoral District Boundaries Commission was established to review the current electoral boundaries and make proposals for the numbers, names and boundaries of Yukon electoral districts. Since the last electoral boundaries review in 1991, there have been changes in the population and communities of the Yukon. The Commission is required by the Elections Act to provide an interim report and a final report. This is the interim report.

The purpose of the interim report is to promote discussion of, and to obtain public comment on, the proposed electoral districts, so that a final report can be completed as required by section 417 of the Elections Act.

Electoral District Boundaries Commission

The Electoral District Boundaries Commission was appointed pursuant to section 408(1) of the Elections Act, which sets out the process by which appointments to the Commission are made.

The Honourable Harry Maddison was appointed chair of the Commission. He was also chair of the 1984, 1977 and 1974 Yukon electoral district boundaries reviews. Judge Maddison served as a federal judge from March 1969 to August 1999. He was a judge of the Yukon Supreme Court, the Northwest Territories Supreme Court, and the Courts of Appeal of the Yukon, the Northwest Territories and Nunavut.

Patricia Cunning, Lois Moorcroft and Doug Phillips are members of the Commission, chosen by the leaders of each of the registered political parties represented in the Legislative Assembly at the time of their appointments.
Patricia Cunning has a Bachelor of Arts degree with Honours from Queen’s University. She has several years work experience in government policy and planning. Ms. Cunning has a long involvement in community organizations and politics. She is a former policy chair of the Yukon Liberal Party and currently serves as vice-president.

Lois Moorcroft was elected as a Member of the Legislative Assembly for the electoral district of Mount Lorne from 1992 to 2000. From 1996 to 2000, she held the Cabinet portfolios of Education, Justice and the Women’s Directorate. Ms. Moorcroft has a Bachelor of Arts in History and Canadian Studies from Trent University. She currently serves as the Yukon Federal Council representative for the New Democratic Party.

Doug Phillips was the Yukon Party MLA for the electoral district of Riverdale North from 1985 to 2000. He was appointed to Cabinet in November 1992 and at various times held the Cabinet portfolios of Education, Tourism, Justice, Public Service Commission and the Women’s Directorate.

Patrick Michael is the chief electoral officer for the Yukon Territory and serves as a member pursuant to section 408(1)(c) of the Elections Act.

Mandate of the Commission

The mandate of the Commission is set out in section 409 of the Elections Act:

> ... to review the existing electoral districts established under the Electoral District Boundaries Act and to make proposals to the Legislative Assembly as to the boundaries, number and names of the electoral districts of the Yukon.

The Commission is carrying out its mandate independent of government. Section 419 of the Elections Act sets out the relevant matters the Commission must consider in the preparation of its interim and final reports:

(a) the density and rate of growth of the population of any area;
(b) the accessibility, size and physical characteristics of any area;

(c) the facilities and patterns of transportation and communication within and between different areas;

(d) available census data and other demographic information;

(e) the number of electors in the electoral districts appearing on the most recent official lists of electors;

(f) any special circumstances relating to the existing electoral districts;

(g) the boundaries of municipalities and First Nations governments;

(h) public input obtained under section 416 [public hearings];

(i) any other reasons or information relied on by the Commission.

Approach

The Commission is mindful that adjustments in one electoral district inevitably have an impact upon a neighbouring electoral district, which in turn influence the next district, and so on. In putting forward these interim proposals the Commission has attempted to make changes to the existing electoral boundaries only where necessary to achieve effective representation and greater voter parity. Where changes were deemed necessary, we attempted to minimize the extent of those changes. The Commission has strived for a result which is balanced and fair.

Process

The Commission was appointed on March 14, 2001. The Elections Act requires the Commission to submit its interim report to the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly within seven months of its appointment.
The Commission implemented a public information plan to explain the Commission’s function and to seek public input. On April 23, 2001, the Commission wrote to a number of individuals and organizations inviting participation in its review of the Yukon’s electoral district boundaries. That letter, attached as Appendix B, provided the Commission’s e-mail address, mailing address, web site address and fax number. The list of invited participants is attached as Appendix C.

In April and May 2001, the Commission published a notice in The Whitehorse Star, The Yukon News, The Klondike Sun and l’Aurore boréale, detailing ways to contact the Commission for further information and inviting written submissions. The notice is attached as part of Appendix D. Rolling advertisements were run on cable television and public service announcements were broadcast on radio. A notice was also sent to every household in the Yukon and is included in Appendix D.

Nineteen written submissions were received and will be included in the public records of the 2001 Electoral District Boundaries Commission. A list of those who made submissions is attached as Appendix E.

Public Meetings

Pursuant to section 416 of the Elections Act, the Commission must hold public hearings before completing its final report. Anyone who wishes may make representations to the Commission at those meetings. The schedule of public meetings is attached as Appendix F. The Commission must submit its final report to the Speaker of the Legislature within five months of the date of submitting the interim report.
PART II: CONSIDERATIONS

The Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms

Section 3 of the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms (the “Charter”) states:

Every citizen of Canada has the right to vote in an election of members of the House of Commons or of a legislative assembly and to be qualified for membership therein.

Legal Precedent

The Commission reviewed all the relevant cases. The first Canadian court case to consider the constitutionality of electoral boundaries was Dixon v. Attorney General of British Columbia, decided by the Supreme Court of British Columbia in 1989. Dixon concluded that there are constitutional limits on the unequal distribution of population between electoral districts. While the Court decided that section 3 of the Charter did not require absolute equality of voting power it did find that “relative equality of voting power is fundamental to the right to vote.”

The Dixon case also concluded that deviations from “absolute parity” should be permitted, but only those “which can be justified on the ground that they contribute to better government of the populous as a whole, giving due weight to regional issues within the populous and geographic factors within the territory governed.”

Dixon allowed that the plus or minus 25 percent deviation in that case was tolerable “given the vast and sparsely populated regions to be found in British Columbia.” On the other hand, as noted by the British Columbia Electoral Boundaries Commission in its Report of December 3, 1998 “nothing in the Dixon decision precludes an argument that, in appropriate circumstances, a deviation greater than plus or minus 25 percent may be justified.” As that Report noted, the only general proposition laid down in Dixon is that deviations from voter parity must be justified.

A percentage deviation occurs when the population, or the number of electors, in one electoral district is compared with the average population, or number of electors, of all the electoral districts. The result is sometimes referred to as a discrepancy or variance from the “electoral quotient or quota” or the “equal population norm,” obtained by dividing the number of electors, or total population, by the total number of electoral districts.

In 1991, the Supreme Court of Canada dealt with the issue of electoral boundaries in Reference Re: Prov. Electoral Boundaries (Sask.)⁸ (the “Saskatchewan Reference”). This case remains the leading Canadian authority on the constitutionality of electoral boundaries. It established that “... the right to vote enshrined in s. 3 of the Charter is not equality of voting power per se, but the right to “effective representation”...”⁹ The majority decision stated:

Each citizen is entitled to be represented in Government. Representation comprehends the idea of having a voice in the deliberations of government as well as the idea of the right to bring one’s grievances and concerns to the attention of one’s government representative; as noted in Dixon ... elected representatives function in two roles – legislative and what has been termed the “ombudsman role.”

What are the conditions of effective representation? The first is relative parity of voting power. ...

But parity of voting power, though of prime importance, is not the only factor to be taken into account in ensuring effective representation. ...

Notwithstanding the fact that the value of a citizen’s vote should not be unduly diluted, it is a practical fact that effective representation cannot often be achieved without taking into account countervailing factors.

First, absolute parity is impossible...

Secondly, such relative parity as may be possible of achievement may prove undesirable because it has the effect of detracting from the primary goal of effective representation. ...

It emerges therefore that deviations from absolute voter parity may be justified on the grounds of practical impossibility or the provision of more effective representation. Beyond this, dilution of one citizen’s vote as compared with another’s should not be countenanced.

The permitted deviations from the equal population norm in that case were as high as 50 percent for the two northern ridings and up to 25 percent for the remaining 64 Saskatchewan ridings. The Court stated such special treatment for the northern ridings was constitutionally acceptable, given the sparse population and the difficulty of communication in the area. The 25 percent deviation allowed for the remaining ridings was also considered acceptable.

Since the Saskatchewan Reference, the Alberta Court of Appeal has rendered two decisions on electoral boundaries. The first was in 1991, entitled Reference re: Electoral Boundaries Commission Act (the “1991 Alberta Reference”). The second was in 1994, entitled Reference re: Electoral Divisions Statutes Amendment Act, 1993 (the “1994 Alberta Reference”).

The 1991 Alberta Reference examined a 50 percent deviation limit for up to five percent of the electoral districts in the province, which satisfied specific statutory criteria (the details of which were attached as an appendix to the case), focusing on their relative remoteness and sparse population. The Court of Appeal unanimously accepted that as reasonable and stated:

We think we can take notice that Alberta contains sparsely populated areas that are also a long distance both from other populated areas and the legislature itself.

The 25 percent deviation permitted in the remaining ridings was also found to be acceptable, where necessary.

In the 1994 Alberta Reference, another panel of the Court of Appeal examined specific statutory boundaries. The unanimous Court made the following statement emphasizing the need to justify deviations:

It is one thing to say that effective representation of a specific community requires an electoral division of a below-average population. That approach invites specific reasons, and specific facts. The Constitution of Canada is sufficiently flexible to permit disparity to serve geographical and demographic reality.

It is quite another to say that any electoral division, for no specific reason, may be smaller than average. In the 1991 Reference, we affirmed the first, not the second. We affirm again that there is no permissible variation if there is no justification. And the onus to establish justification lies with those who suggest the variation.16

The case of MacKinnon v. Prince Edward Island17 was decided by the Prince Edward Island Supreme Court in 1993, in the interval between the two Alberta reference cases. The Court found the Election Act (P.E.I.) contravened section 3 of the Charter as it legislated unacceptable disparities between the numbers of voters in a district and the provincial average, ranging between 115 percent over the average and 63 percent under the average. Twelve districts were in excess of 40 percent above or below the provincial average.

In 1998, the case of Charlottetown (City) v. Prince Edward Island came before the Prince Edward Island Court of Appeal.18 At issue was new legislation creating 27 electoral districts which provided for an electoral population variance of plus or minus 25 percent. The Court of Appeal held that this level of deviation did not violate section 3 of the Charter, emphasizing that in determining the amount of variance permissible, the Courts must give due deference and considerable leeway to the Legislature.19 An application for leave to appeal Charlottetown to the Supreme Court of Canada was dismissed without reasons on December 2, 1999.20

The creation of Nunavut required changes to the electoral districts in the Northwest Territories, which led to the most recent case on the constitutionality of electoral districts: Friends of Democracy v. Northwest Territories (Attorney General)(“Friends of Democracy”).21 This was a 1999 decision of the Supreme Court of the Northwest Territories, which examined amendments to the Legislative Assembly and Executive Council Act (N.W.T.) dividing the Northwest Territories into 14 electoral districts. After Nunavut was established as a separate territory, Yellowknife was expected to have 44 percent of the total population of the Northwest Territories, with no more than 25 percent of the seats. In enacting the amendments, the legislature rejected the recommendations of the Northwest Territories Electoral Boundaries Commission to add two additional electoral districts for the voters in and around the City of Yellowknife. The Court held that the amendments violated section 3 of the Charter and stated:

Considering the factors of geography, community history and interests, language differences, difficulties in communication with remote communities and minority representation, not to mention the normal difficulties and expenses of travel between the seat of government at Yellowknife and the various communities outside Yellowknife, I am satisfied that there probably is justification within the ambit of section 3 of the Charter for the present over-representation of the electoral districts whose percentage variations in population are below the average. On the other hand, I am unable to find similar justification for the gross under-representation of those other districts where the variations are markedly (25% or more) above the average. This gross under-representation must constitute a clear violation of section 3 of the Charter in the absence of due justification.²²

This Commission is bound to follow the principles in the Supreme Court of Canada Saskatchewan Reference decision. While the Commission is not bound to follow the decisions it reviewed from other courts, it has been guided where those authorities appeared persuasive. The Commission paid particular attention to the circumstances influencing those decisions which involved northern and sparsely populated electoral districts.

Demographic Information
Section 419(a) of the Elections Act mandates that the Commission take into account “the density and rate of growth of the population of any area”. Section 419(d) requires the Commission to consider “available census data and other demographic information”. The Commission was informed that the results of the federal census taken this spring would not be available prior to the deadline for completing our final report. The most recent census information available is the Statistics Canada Census of 1996, which the Commission reviewed for background purposes. We concluded that this information is outdated.

Section 419(e) of the Elections Act requires the Commission to take into account “the number of electors in the electoral districts appearing on the most recent official lists of electors”. Previous Yukon Commissions, and most recently, the 1991 Commission, relied upon the number of eligible electors rather than population figures. The Commission decided to use the most accurate and up-to-date information: the numbers of electors from the 2000 Yukon General Election.

Deviation Guideline

The Yukon Electoral District Boundaries Commission Report, 1991 (the “1991 Yukon Report”) noted:

> ... I have decided that the range of plus or minus 25 percent should serve as a guide in framing my recommendations for the Yukon’s electoral boundaries. However, where necessary, I was prepared to consider a greater deviation in order to achieve effective representation.\(^{23}\)

The Elections Act does not refer to a particular percentage deviation. Subsequent to the Dixon decision, a deviation of plus or minus 25 percent has been generally accepted in Canada, and has been referred to as “the Canadian standard.”\(^{24}\) This Commission has decided to apply the plus or minus 25 percent deviation as a guideline.

Special Circumstances

Section 419(f) of the Elections Act requires the Commission to take into account “any special circumstances relating to the existing electoral districts.” “Special circumstances” are not defined in the Elections Act. The Saskatchewan Reference spoke about some of the factors which may justify departure from absolute voter parity in the pursuit of more effective representation. That decision made it clear that the list of factors that may need to be taken into account is not closed, however those identified were:

- geography
- community history
- community interests
- minority representation.

The Friends of Democracy case added to this list.\(^{25}\)

- language differences
- difficulties in communication with remote communities
- travel expenses.

The 1991 Yukon Report noted that substantial deviations from voter parity had been a characteristic feature of Yukon electoral districts for the previous two decades. That Report also noted under “Special circumstances of the Yukon”:

The entire region outside Whitehorse is sparsely populated and ... no other Canadian city dominates its province or territory to the extent that Whitehorse dominates the Yukon. The disproportionate representation of rural areas in the existing legislature was explicitly intended to offset this feature of population distribution. Given relatively less developed municipal organization of much of rural Yukon, MLAs from those areas contend with a broader range of responsibilities toward their constituents than is common elsewhere in Canada. Also, Yukoners are used to intensive representation and expect to be able to meet with their representatives, face-to-face, on a regular basis.\(^{26}\)

This Commission acknowledges that similar circumstances exist today.

Number of Electoral Districts

Section 409 of the Elections Act explicitly mandates the Commission to review and make proposals as to the number of electoral districts. Section 9(2) of the Yukon Act, 1985, provides for a minimum of 12 and a maximum of 20 members of the Legislative Assembly.
The Commission considered the potential consequences of having an odd or even number of seats in the legislature. Odd and even numbers of electoral districts are found in other jurisdictions in Canada. The Yukon has experienced both circumstances at different periods in its history. We concluded that there are offsetting advantages and disadvantages to both, which result in the issue having no influence on our proposals.

Timing of the Next Review

The Commission has kept in mind throughout its deliberations that section 411 of the Elections Act provides for another electoral boundaries review within six to eight years.

Principles

In addition to following the mandatory considerations set out in section 419 of the Elections Act, the Commission was guided by the following principles: effective representation, voter parity, geographic boundaries, the role of the Legislative Assembly, and the electoral quotient.

Effective Representation

In the Saskatchewan Reference, the Supreme Court of Canada ruled that the purpose of the right to vote enshrined in section 3 of the Charter is the right to effective representation and not equality of voting power per se. The Court recognized that absolute parity is impossible. Such relative parity as may be possible could prove undesirable if it detracts from the primary goal of effective representation. Various factors, such as those reviewed earlier, may be taken into account to achieve that goal. The Commission has been guided by this fundamental objective.

Voter Parity

The Dixon decision examined the historical development of voting rights in Canada and concluded that relative equality of voting power is fundamental to the right to vote enshrined in section 3 of the Charter. Indeed, this was acknowledged as the dominant principle underlying our system of representational democracy. On the other hand, it also recognized that absolute equality of voting power has never been required in Canada, and that some degree of deviation is permissible. The Saskatchewan Reference stated that parity of voting power is of prime importance in our representative democracy. The Commission has been guided by this principle and has sought to achieve relative voter parity, wherever possible, while also giving heed to the other important principles referred to in this interim report.

Geographic Boundaries

The Commission has sought in its deliberations to simplify and rationalize electoral boundaries, wherever possible, on the basis of physical geography. Our intention is that the boundaries will be logical delineations, which can be easily understood by electors. We took into account the physical characteristics of the electoral districts, as required under section 419(b) of the Elections Act, in proposing the boundaries.

Role of the Legislative Assembly

The relative difficulty faced by some MLAs in serving their constituents, particularly in electoral districts which are vast and sparsely populated, received our full consideration. The Commission balanced the weight given this factor with the knowledge that the Legislature itself is able to take action to assist members in meeting these responsibilities.

Electoral Quotient

An electoral quotient is the average number of electors per electoral district. The plus or minus 25 percent guideline is measured against the quotient.

A common approach in Canada is to calculate the electoral quotient by dividing the total number of electors by the total number of electoral districts. This approach is not exclusive. The Saskatchewan Constituency Boundaries Act, 1993 employs a different method in calculating the electoral quotient. It removes the two northern ridings and their populations from its calculations. The electoral quotient for the remainder of the province is determined by using only the 56 remaining ridings and the population of those ridings. This legislated approach is in keeping with the recognition in the Saskatchewan Reference that the two northern ridings are justified, as they are vast with a relatively small and dispersed population.
PART III: PROPOSALS

The Commission proposes 16 electoral districts, a reduction of one from the present 17 electoral districts. The Commission did not begin its deliberations with any particular goal as to the number of electoral districts. Rather, we focused on the issues of effective representation and voter parity, and the number of electoral districts emerged from that approach.

The 16 proposed electoral districts are comprised of eight urban electoral districts and eight rural electoral districts. Although Mount Lorne and Lake Laberge could be characterized as country-residential, they are closer to being rural electoral districts than urban ones.

Residents of electoral districts within the City of Whitehorse reside in relatively cohesive and geographically compact neighbourhoods. Such residents are also generally closer to multiple government facilities (federal, territorial, First Nation and municipal) and are presumably more able than rural Yukoners to access the services those governments provide. We reason that this would reduce the extent to which Whitehorse residents might otherwise rely on their MLAs to assist them. Thus, effective representation of Whitehorse residents may be enhanced simply by virtue of their location. In turn, this generally allows somewhat larger populations in City electoral districts to be represented as effectively as smaller, more dispersed rural populations.

Establishing the Electoral Quotient

The total number of electors in the Yukon is estimated to be 18,292, based on the 2000 General Election results. The Commission has decided not to include the electoral district of Vuntut Gwitchin and its 192 electors in the calculation of the electoral quotient. The electoral population of Vuntut Gwitchin is significantly smaller than the average population in the other electoral districts. The Commission decided that including the electoral district of Vuntut Gwitchin in the calculation would skew the quotient.
Therefore, for the purposes of this interim report, the Commission calculates the average number of electors per electoral district as follows:

Total Electoral Population of Yukon less Electors in Vuntut Gwitchin [18,100]
_________________________________ Average Number of Electors per Electoral District (Electoral Quotient)
Total Number of Electoral Districts [1,207] less Vuntut Gwitchin [15]

Using the above formula, the average number of electors per electoral district is 1,207. Applying the plus or minus 25 percent deviation guideline, 25 percent over the average is 1,509 electors and 25 percent under the average is 905 electors. A comparison of the proposed electoral districts with the existing electoral districts, and their respective electoral quotients, is attached as Appendix G.

Summary
The Commission proposes:

• a new electoral district of Copperbelt, resulting from the division of the existing electoral district of Whitehorse West into two electoral districts;
• the Whitehorse subdivision of Crestview be part of the proposed electoral district of Porter Creek North;
• the Marsh Lake area be part of the proposed electoral district of Southern Lakes;
• the existing electoral district of Riverside be split between the proposed electoral districts of Whitehorse Centre and Riverdale North;
• a new electoral district of Tintina, which merges the existing electoral districts of Mayo-Tatchun and Faro;
• a new electoral district of Tu Cho, which includes the communities of Ross River and Watson Lake;
• the electoral district of Vuntut Gwitchin be retained.

Electoral Districts
Copperbelt

The Commission proposes a new electoral district of Copperbelt, resulting from the division of the existing electoral district of Whitehorse West into two electoral districts.

This new electoral district accommodates the growth of population in the Copper Ridge area, which has increased the number of electors in the existing electoral district of Whitehorse West to an unacceptable 84.4 percent above the average. This more southerly and expansive electoral district will be named Copperbelt, with a boundary generally following along Hamilton Boulevard and Falcon Drive, to the intersection of Ruby Road, then due west to the City limit. The estimated number of electors in Copperbelt is 1,013, or 16.1 percent below the average. Although the number of electors in this electoral district is less than the number in the proposed electoral district of Whitehorse West, we have allowed for an anticipated increase in the population, particularly in the neighbourhoods designed for mobile homes.

The residents of this proposed electoral district share urban interests. The proposed electoral district is adjacent to the City centre and residents have relatively easy access to the multiple government services available there.

Klondike

The Commission proposes that the existing electoral district of Klondike be retained with no changes to its boundaries.

The estimated electoral population of 1,233 is only slightly over the average at 2.2 percent and no substantial change in the main community of Dawson City or the remainder of the electoral district is anticipated.

Kluane

The Commission proposes that the existing electoral district of Kluane remain essentially the same with minor changes to its boundaries.
We recommend that the southeast boundary of Kluane be moved slightly to the west, allowing the electors in the Fish Lake Road area to be part of the proposed electoral district of Whitehorse West, to which they are adjacent. This will not have a significant effect on the electoral population of Kluane. We also propose a rationalization of the southeast corner of the boundary to extend it along the 60th parallel to longitude 135 degrees 30 minutes west. No substantial change in population is expected. The number of electors is estimated at 936, which is 22.5 percent below the average.

The Commission considered adjusting the boundaries to include the Ibex Valley area in an adjacent electoral district, but decided against doing so because that would have reduced the electoral population in Kluane to an unacceptably low level. The 1991 Yukon Report also recognized this challenge and, in our view, the situation has not changed appreciably. There were 248 electors from the Ibex Valley on the list of electors for the 2000 General Election. If these voters were taken out of Kluane, the electoral district would be left with an electoral population of 688, or 43 percent below the average.

While we recognize that the residents in the Ibex Valley area may have different community interests to those residing in other communities along the Alaska Highway in the electoral district, they share rural lifestyles and they are connected by the highway, which is the central transportation corridor through this rural area.

Lake Laberge

The Commission proposes changing the southern boundary of the existing electoral district of Lake Laberge to include the electors of the Crestview subdivision within the proposed electoral district of Porter Creek North.

The existing electoral district of Lake Laberge has an electoral population of 22.4 percent above the average. Placing the entire subdivision of Crestview in the proposed electoral district of Porter Creek North, with which it has common interests, reduces the electoral population of Lake Laberge to 859 or 28.8 percent below the average. While this is slightly outside the 25 percent guideline, there is prospect of population growth.
within the proposed electoral district, creating a reasonable expectation of bringing the electoral population within the guideline. The electors remaining in the proposed electoral district share country-residential lifestyles.

We considered expanding the boundaries of the proposed electoral district to incorporate neighbouring electors. However, the Commission found this to be impractical as it would have a significant adverse impact on the electoral populations in the neighbouring electoral districts.

McIntyre-Takhini

The Commission proposes changing the existing boundary, such that the entire electoral district of McIntyre-Takhini is located above the Airport (Reserve) Escarpment.

A change to the eastern boundary will place the Marwell Industrial Subdivision in the proposed electoral district of Whitehorse Centre. The new boundary generally follows the foot of the Airport (Reserve) Escarpment from the bottom of Two Mile Hill to the Yukon River. The electoral population is reduced from 1,390 to 1,243 or 3.0 percent above the average. The residents share urban interests.

Mount Lorne

The Commission proposes changing the existing boundary of the electoral district of Mount Lorne to reduce the electoral population to within the accepted guideline by including the Marsh Lake area in the proposed electoral district of Southern Lakes.

This proposal requires a revised eastern boundary following the McClintock River to the Alaska Highway and due south to latitude 60 degrees 23 minutes. This significantly reduces the remaining electoral population of Mount Lorne from 36.8 percent above the average to 1,267 or 5.0 percent above the average.

The proposed western boundary is rationalized to run due west from the intersection of the Wheaton River to longitude 135 degrees 08 minutes west, then due north to latitude 60 degrees 30 minutes, eastward to Coal Lake, then due north to the City limit. This proposed change is purely for geographical simplification and does not significantly affect the electoral population.

The residents of this electoral district share interests associated with their country-residential lifestyles.

Porter Creek North

The Commission proposes that the existing electoral district of Porter Creek North be expanded to include the subdivision of Crestview.

We propose several changes to the boundaries of this electoral district. The western boundary is extended to longitude 135 degrees 30 minutes, incorporating the subdivision of Crestview and the area residents on the west side of the Alaska Highway. The northern boundary is moved to latitude 60 degrees 48 minutes, which will include the residents of Forestview and those along the east side of the north Klondike Highway, in the proposed electoral district of Lake Laberge. We propose that the south-east boundary be moved northward and run due east from the intersection of Wann Road, Hickory Street and Range Road to the Yukon River.

These changes result in an increase to the electoral population from 1,170 to 1,493 or 23.7 percent above the average. While this is a relatively high deviation, it is offset by the limited growth potential in this electoral district. It is also a compact geographic area with residents having shared urban interests and relative proximity to multiple government services in the City centre.

Porter Creek South

The Commission proposes retaining the existing electoral district of Porter Creek South with boundary changes to accommodate the division of Porter Creek into two electoral districts with similar electoral populations.

We propose a change to the northeast corner expanding the electoral district to include electors residing on the east side of Hickory Street to the intersection of Range Road.
This increases the electoral population from 1,229 to 1,431 or 18.6 percent above the average.

The proposed electoral district is in a compact geographic area and we do not expect significant population growth. The residents have shared urban interests and relative proximity to multiple government services in the City centre.

Riverdale North

The Commission proposes dividing the Riverdale area into two electoral districts, bordered by the Yukon River and the City limit. The proposed electoral district of Riverdale North includes the Riverdale portion of the existing electoral district of Riverside.

One of the two proposed electoral districts resulting from the division of the area is Riverdale North. The change to the existing boundary includes the residents north of Klondike Road and east of Lewes Boulevard, who are part of the existing electoral district of Riverside. The northern boundary will also change to follow the Yukon River northward to the City limit. The electoral population increases from 1,171 to 1,406 or 16.5 percent above the average, which is within the 25 percent guideline and allows room for growth. This deviation is offset by the compact geographic area, shared urban interests, condensed neighbourhoods and relative proximity to multiple government services in the City centre.

Riverdale South

The Commission proposes retaining the existing electoral district of Riverdale South with boundary changes to accommodate the division of Riverdale into two electoral districts with similar electoral populations.

There are some changes to the boundary, including an extension along Pelly Road to include the electors to the north and west of that Road. There is an increase in the electoral population from 1,073 to 1,376 or 14.0 percent above the average. As with the proposed electoral district of Riverdale North, this proposed electoral district is marked by a compact geographic area, shared urban interests, condensed neighbourhoods, and relative proximity to multiple government services in the City centre.

_Southern Lakes_

The Commission proposes a new electoral district of Southern Lakes, which includes the communities of the Southern Lakes area, including Carcross, Johnsons Crossing, Marsh Lake, Tagish and Teslin.

The proposed electoral district has an electoral population of 1,037 or 14.1 percent below the average. The main communities in the electoral district are linked by all-season highways. While those communities are spread out, the residents in the proposed electoral district share geographic ties and are chiefly located within the communities.

The Commission recognizes the ongoing sharing of community interests between the Carcross/Tagish and Teslin Tlingit First Nations, whose traditional territories overlap within the district.

_Tintina_

The Commission proposes a new electoral district of Tintina, which merges the existing electoral districts of Faro and Mayo-Tatchun.

The number of electors in the existing electoral district of Faro has decreased significantly from the 1996 election (670) to the 2000 General Election (248) and even further in the 2000 By-election (234). Using the results from the 2000 General Election, the number of electors in the existing Faro electoral district was 78.1 percent below the average for the Yukon. The electoral population in the neighbouring existing electoral district of Mayo-Tatchun was also low, at 22.7 percent below the average. After much deliberation, the Commission proposes merging the existing electoral districts of Faro and Mayo-Tatchun.

The communities in the proposed electoral district of Tintina are dispersed and most of the population is located within these communities. They are connected by highway transportation corridors and extensive river systems. These communities also share similar interests, including mining and tourism. The estimated number of electors for the proposed electoral district is 1,108 or 8.2 percent below the average, allowing for the potential growth contemplated by some of these communities.

Tu Cho

The Commission proposes a new electoral district of Tu Cho, including the communities of Ross River, Swift River, Upper Liard and Watson Lake.

Tu Cho, which translates to “big water”, is the Kaska name for the centrally-located Frances Lake and is proposed as the name for this new electoral district. The north-west boundary will extend to include the community of Ross River and the area north to latitude 63 degrees 30 minutes. The electoral population of the proposed electoral district is increased from 9.4 percent below the average to 1,254 or 3.9 percent above the average. This relatively low deviation allows for potential population growth. The communities in the proposed electoral district are connected by highway transportation corridors and share similar interests in forestry, mining and tourism. While these communities are disbursed, the majority of the residents of the proposed electoral district are located within these communities.

The traditional territories of the Ross River and Liard First Nations overlap and encompass the majority of this proposed electoral district. We anticipate a sharing of interests between the Kaska First Nation communities in the Ross River and Watson Lake areas.

Vuntut Gwitchin

The Commission proposes that the existing electoral district of Vuntut Gwitchin remain unchanged.

The Commission recognizes Vuntut Gwitchin is the least populated electoral district in the Yukon. We propose that it remain a separate electoral district due to a number of special circumstances, which the Commission is required to consider pursuant to section 419(f) of the Elections Act. We also note that this electoral district was considered a “special case” in the 1991 Yukon Report, which spoke of “virtual unanimity regarding its unique character” in the evidence presented to that Commission.\(^{28}\) The Report continued:

> The area is sparsely populated and the most remote and least accessible district in the Yukon. The community of Old Crow is almost exclusively Vuntut Gwitchin and is the only such community in the Yukon. The Gwitchin language is not spoken elsewhere in the Yukon. Old Crow is distinct in language, culture, geography and lifestyle, even from its closest neighbours. Moreover, the traditional practices of the Gwitchin people give the area a special community of interest found nowhere else in the Yukon.\(^{29}\)

Those reasons have justified the electoral district’s existence since its creation in 1977,\(^{30}\) and they continue to apply. Although air transport and communication links have improved access to the community of Old Crow, reducing the isolation factor, those improvements have not been significant enough to justify incorporating Old Crow into another electoral district. Indeed, the accessibility of the area is something we must consider pursuant to section 419(b) of the Elections Act. Therefore, we propose that Vuntut Gwitchin remain a separate electoral district for the following reasons:

- it is geographically distinct from all the other electoral districts in the Yukon, in that it is the most remote and has no road access;
- the community of Old Crow is almost exclusively Vuntut Gwitchin First Nation with common language, traditional lifestyle and culture;
- the strong common interests of the residents may be adversely affected if the community is included in another electoral district.

Whitehorse Centre

The Commission proposes expanding the boundary of the existing electoral district of Whitehorse Centre to include the downtown portion of the existing electoral district of Riverside.

The proposed southern boundary is moved to the Yukon River to include part of the existing electoral district of Riverside. The proposed northern boundary follows the foot of the Airport (Reserve) Escarpment northerly to the Yukon River, which will include the Marwell Industrial Subdivision. This results in the electoral population being increased from 22.6 percent below the average to 1,278 or 5.9 percent above the average.

This proposed electoral district is a compact geographic area and has condensed neighbourhoods. There is a sharing of downtown urban interests among the residents and access to multiple government services in the City centre. There is limited potential for population growth in this proposed electoral district, but the relatively small deviation of 5.9 percent allows for changes to the electoral population.

Whitehorse West

The Commission proposes a significant change to the boundary of the existing electoral district of Whitehorse West, resulting from its division into two parts, one of which is the proposed electoral district of Copperbelt. The proposed electoral district of Whitehorse West includes the subdivisions of Arkell, part of Copper Ridge and Logan.

We propose that the boundary follow Hamilton Boulevard and Falcon Road, then proceed west from the intersection with Ruby Road to the City limit. The boundary proceeds north along the City limit to the boundary of the proposed electoral district of McIntyre-Takhini. This proposal responds to the significant increase in population in the Copper Ridge subdivision. The electoral population is reduced from 84.4 percent above the average to 1,166 or 3.4 percent below the average, which allows for significant growth in the area.

The residents live in cohesive neighbourhoods with shared urban interests and relative proximity to multiple government services in the City centre.

APPENDIX B: LETTER OF INVITATION

April 23, 2001

The Yukon Electoral District Boundaries Commission invites you to participate in its review of the Yukon’s electoral districts. All Yukoners have an opportunity to comment on the territory’s electoral boundaries during two stages of the Commission’s work.

Stage 1 covers written submissions by individuals, governments, community organizations, labour and business sectors, educational institutions, and political parties. Submissions are due by June 1, 2001.

Stage 2 is a series of public meetings in all Yukon communities in the fall of 2001.

The Commission’s mandate is to review the existing electoral districts and make proposals to the Legislative Assembly on the boundaries, number, and names of the Yukon’s electoral districts.

This electoral boundaries review is an important exercise for all Yukoners. The Commission's proposals may change the boundaries of the electoral districts and the neighbourhoods in them. We hope that you will take part in this public process and send a written submission to the Commission by mail to the Yukon Electoral District Boundaries Commission, Box 32047 Whitehorse, Yukon Y1A 5P9 or, by fax to: (867) 393-7049 or, by e-mail to: yukonboundaries@YKnet.ca. You may also make a submission at the public meetings to be held in the fall.

The Commission is independent of government. Its Interim and Final Reports will be submitted to the Legislature.

If you have questions about the Commission or if you need information about the Yukon’s existing electoral boundaries, please call the Commission Secretariat at 393-7014 or 1-867-393-7014 (toll free). The Commission also has a web site at www.yukonboundaries.ca.

Householder (Mailed to Yukon residents):
Yukon Electoral District Boundaries Commission

The Electoral District Boundaries Commission is reviewing the size, name and number of the Electoral Districts in the Yukon and will make proposals to the Legislative Assembly for changes to the electoral boundaries. The work of the Commission may change your electoral district and the neighbourhoods in it. The Commission wants to hear from everyone who wants to take part in this review.

You have two opportunities to comment on the Electoral Boundaries as they are now and what you would like to see changed. First, you may send written submissions to the Commission. The deadline for written submissions is June 1, 2001. Please send your comments by mail to:
Yukon Electoral District Boundaries Commission
Box 32047, Whitehorse, Yukon Y1A 5P9 or by fax to:
Yukon Electoral District Boundaries Commission
1 (867) 393-7049
or by e-mail to:
yukonboundaries@YKnet.ca

The Commission will write an Interim Report outlining the proposed number of electoral districts, their boundaries and names. Second, you may take part in public meetings that the Commission will hold in all Yukon communities in the fall of 2001. The dates for these meetings will be announced late this summer. At the meetings, you may speak to Commission members or, once again, make a written submission.

The Commission will draft its Final Report after the public meetings. This report will contain the Commission’s proposals for the boundaries, number, and names of the electoral districts of the Yukon.

You may provide comments at each stage of the review. The Commission wants to hear from individuals, governments, community organizations and political parties, and will consider every submission it receives. For information, call:
